1. Target task:

Writing a Job Application Email.

I regularly write professional emails when applying for job opportunities.

The task involves introducing myself, expressing my interest in the position, highlighting relevant qualifications, and referring the recruiter to my CV.

2. Structured prompt (R.A.C.E) + Data masking:

Prompt used:

Role:	You are a professional recruitment communication assistant.
Action:	Write a job application email for the IT Specialist position.
Context:	I am applying for a full-time IT Specialist position at Company A. The position is located in City1. The job advertisement asks applicants to send their CV.
Expectation:	Write a professional email with a clear subject line, greeting, brief introduction, expression of interest in the position, and a closing mentioning that my CV is attached. Keep the email under 150 words, use a natural and professional tone, and do not invent any qualifications, skills, or experience.

sanitised input:

3. Iterative refinement:

follow-up prompt 1:

The email was revised to remove the Portfolio reference and focus only on the CV as requested in the job advertisement.

Good, but remove the Portfolio reference and keep the application focused on the CV, as the advertisement only asks applicants to send their CV.

4. Verification & impact:

Verification (The Three-Step Check):

1. Read it as a sceptic:

Confirmed that the content matches the purpose of a job application email.

2. Check the hard parts:

- Job title: IT Specialist
- Job type: Full Time
- Location: City1
- Application requirement: CV only
- Qualifications and experience: No specific qualifications, skills, or experience were invented
- Arithmetic check: No numerical data was used.

3. Own it:

Reviewed the final email and decided that I would defend every line as my own.

Impact:

1- Estimated time saved:

Approximately 10 minutes per job application email.

2- Quality improvement:

AI helped produce a clear, structured, and professional email that matched the job advertisement requirements.
